RICH PLANTER, BURIED

A Court Question

Ellis Parker Butler, noted novellst, emphasized the fact that "pigs is pigs." but he never did explain just when a pig passed the pig stage and became a hog.

Wednestay in the First division of the circuit court an argument arose over the age of a pig and Lake Hayes and several other attorneys, employed in the $10 replevin case, differed materially until Judge Young had to rule out the argument as immaterial and irrelevant and unimportant.

Two negroes, brothers, a pig, 13 months old, three months old when the disnute arose, Amanda, a sister of the litigants, and 12 witnesses were the principals in the important case.

Here is how the trouble arose, Sidney Jackson's three-months-old pigger are wont to do when the corn "craps" were gathered, and it had been the custom in the family to let pigs roams at will after harvesting time. But Charlle Jackson, his brother, he says, dicked up his piggie and kept it and he had to go into the magistrate court and "replevy" the diminutive swine. He got possession and that is nine points in law, but Charlle appealed and now Judge Young must wrestle with the perplexing question as to who owns the pig. Sid because it is his pig, or Charlie because Sid's pig got in his field.
